Editor's Window

One week ago this nation was fiercely clutched by a glowering crisis. All too suddenly we were called upon to measure our height, gauge our resolve and examine with profound candor the passion of our beliefs.

It was a time to be counted.

Men and issues had brought us to this point in the seemingly inexorable way that our destiny has of unfolding.

Yet, it was in vast measure, of our own doing. We chose some of the men. We choose, no matter how haphazardly or unconsciously, the issues and the moment to be confronted by them. We chose last year, we chose the year before; we have chosen every day of our lives, and by so doing we are each as responsible for the troubled or triumphant countenance of our nation as we are for the determination or hesitation in our hearts.

Next Tuesday we go again to the polls. We will choose other men and other issues, without really knowing altogether what the consequences of our choice will be. And whether we choose earnestly, impetuously, or not at all, our destiny as men and as a nation will grind on, its pace seemingly beyond our regulation, and attuned instead to some eternal cadence.

But not its direction.

For there is in the souls of men the ardor and the rage and the power to compel the course of tomorrow and form its visage. It is a thing we do not always do well, but inevitably we do it. We do it whenever we vote. Or do not vote. We do it whenever we choose, whether wisely or foolishly. Or not at all. We do it whenever compassion moves us to succor someone in distress. Or venality turns us away from him. It is the compounded act of our doing and our undoing which fixes the aiming face of destiny like some polar magnet.

We have done as well as we know how in preparing ourselves for this election. We have examined the candidates and the issues. We have weighed them with considerable deliberation. We have made our choice. In some instances it may prove to have been unfortunate, in others, auspicious. But at least, in either case, we cannot accuse ourselves, or be accused by others, of having forfeited the field without a contest.

Our position has not been capriciously taken. We have certain benchmarks, certain weights and values, which we throw on the other side of the scale when appraising the man and the issue. They are these:

1. We chose men by merit, not party. For parties can never be responsible or accountable for public office. It is the men elected to them who are.

2. We are opposed, in principle, to tax exemptions, particularly when they are established by class and not by condition. If exemption from taxation carried with it an equivalent exemption from use of the services and facilities of government, it might be a different matter. But an exemption is, prima facie, a casting off of obligation on to the shoulders of others; because the burden is never lightened, and someone has to carry it.

3. We are opposed in principle to anything which tends to submerge the individual in socialized obscurity. This, unfortunately, has been the path along which the whole searching mass of civilization has been moving for ages, and we think that nothing will turn it aside. But we shall continue to hope and to speak out in such a way that perhaps it will not go so far or so fast as it would if no one was dragging their feet.

4. We believe in minorities; in their right to be; in their need to be. Without them, there could be no majority.

STUDYING THE MEASURES

The bewildering and unfortunate profusion of measures appearing on the ballot on Tuesday has baffled many a conscientious voter, and left completely indifferent the casual voter.

This dangerous frustration is to be regretted — regretted as much, perhaps, as the absurd and contradictory notion that the people are, in these instances, better informed and more adequately prepared to legislate on certain matters than our elected representatives.

The argument that the initiative and the referendum are safeguards against dilatory or autocratic legislatures is a good one; but there is no measure on the ballot because the legislature either refused to do what the people, or a major segment, wanted, or did do something to which some other segment was opposed.

The initiative process is being regrettably abused; but, nevertheless, we are confronted with the particulars of that abuse and must seek to inform ourselves as best we are able. The Secretary of State for California has issued to each voter a pamphlet containing the measures and arguments for and against each one.

The Commonwealth Club of California prints an official journal. The issue of 24 September contains a statement of each measure, pro and con arguments and some extracts of club debate.

The League of Women Voters has also printed a digest of the principal arguments, entitled Pros and Cons.

With varying degrees of objectivity, these documents can give the voter some frame of reference upon which to construct his own opinions. If doing so is too tedious, then he had better do something more than yearn to be released from the responsibility. He might, perhaps, consider getting the grave business of legislation back into the legislature.

REGULAR FEATURES

Because of this Special Election Issue we have not been able to run our popular regular features, but they will appear once again next week. Vital and important news, so far as space permits, appears on page 24.

We hope you will feel as we do, that the voting franchise, and the intelligent exercise of its privilege, is transcendent in importance and deserving of all our energy and concentration.

Uncontested Offices

Democrat George R. Reilly, the incumbent, stands unopposed for member of the State Board of Equalization from the First District.

The following candidates' names will appear on the ballot for the uncontested judicial offices: For Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of California, Phil S. Gibson; for Associate Justices of the Supreme Court, Matthew O. Tobriner and Roger J. Traynor;

For Justice of the District Court of Appeals, First Appellate District, Division One, John B. Molinari and Raymond L. Sullivan; for Justice, District Court of Appeals, First Appellate District, Division Two, James R. Agee;

For Presiding Justice, District Court of Appeals, First Appellate District, Division Three, Murray Draper; for Justices of the District Court of Appeals, First Appellate District, Division Three, Preston Divine and Byrl R. Salsman.

☆ NATIONALLY HONORED

☆ F. B. I. ACADEMY GRADUATE

☆ PAST PRESIDENT PEACE OFFICERS ASSOCIATION

☆ ENDORSED BY RETIRING SHERIFF TIBBS

☆ 13 YEARS AS CARMEL POLICE CHIEF

A poll taken Tuesday morning of this week, indicated the race for Sheriff to be almost evenly divided with each candidate showing equal strength.

Many observers, wise in the way of politics, have stated that less than one thousand votes will separate the two men when the final tally is in.

ONE THOUSAND CARMEL CITIZENS DID NOT VOTE IN THE PRIMARY.

Let us all—in the spirit of good law enforcement—fervently hope these Carmelites find their way to the polls next Tuesday.

We owe it to the county—but mainly, we owe it to ourselves, to see that the best man is elected. That man is Clyde P. Klaumann.

Former U. S. Vice President Richard Nixon emphasizes California cannot afford four more years of the Brown Administration... the most expensive state government in the history of our country which has imposed on Californians the greatest additional state tax burdens known to man.

A Republican, he promises that, if he is chosen by the people to be the next Governor of California at the polls on Tuesday, he will oppose a proposed statewide property tax and a suggested state withholding tax.

He has a five-point program to get more service for less money from social welfare programs. Another five-point program to help older people manage their own affairs with dignity. His eight-point law enforcement program, he says, will make this state a model for effectively preventing and fighting crime. Mr. Nixon promises to undertake a "three-pronged anti-Communist program." He has 12 points in his program to better public education in California.

Richard Nixon says he will initiate a crusade for new business investment, thus creating more jobs in the state, and that his administration will welcome new businesses coming to California. He states he will end indifference and indecision on use of natural resources in business with a six-point program.

He will support the highway program but give greater consideration to the feelings of the people in freeway construction.

He pledges to cut $50 million from government spending in California by making savings in five areas. He will work for the eradication of discrimination and segregation. He stands for the farmer's need of a supplemental labor supply where there is a shortage of qualified farm workers.

Mr. Nixon says he will fire the present director of the water program and replace him with an able administrator, and act similarly with the Director of Agriculture. He pledges to lick the smog problem; establish a Southern California rapid transit district and institute his five-point program to improve facilities and use of lands

CHOICE

It is usual in state political campaigns for the popular and most enthusiastic interest to be centered on the gubernatorial contest. This can mean less, and appeal more readily, than any other contest, because it is typical of public reaction to express itself symptomatically with a fascination for the figurehead.

The figureheads, in the instance of the present campaign, have not distinguished themselves. They have squabbled over the most irrelevant and inconsequential matters. Their campaigns have been an affront to the majesty of the state. In essence, one has said, "I have done it well;" the other has responded, "I can do it better."

How intriguing.

But a choice must be made, no matter how pedestrian. Finding grounds for such a choice is no mean task, but eventually a conscientious person may cling to this: Nixon's political prestige is infinitely greater.

He has conducted himself as a Vice-President of the United States with vigor, devotion and determination. His sincerity in seeking the office of governor is not above questioning; and yet, it may reasonably be assumed that, if he succeeds to it, he will manipulate and exercise it with a degree of competence which if not terrible and ardent in intensity, will at least be relevant to his responsibilities.

Pat Brown has been a singularly unimposing governor, whose failure to command the respect, or even regard, of the Legislature is depressing, and whose embarrassing indecision in the Chessman case, to say nothing of a series of postures timidly assumed in a succession of hard issues, has been disillusioning.

Richard Nixon has still some promise in his image, and for this reason alone he may be preferred.

Incumbent Democratic Governor Edmund G. Brown is asking the people of California to elect him for a second term next week.

He declares that in his past four years as head of the state's administration he has proved that he knows California and its problems; cares about California's ever-increasing numbers of people; works for all of the people; and is ably prepared to lead California for the next four years as the greatest state in the nation.

He believes that the policies of his administration, past and future, are best; that California will regress under a Republican regime.

He gained renomination in this year's June primary with the largest total vote received by any state office contestant, regardless of political party.

Attorney General Mosk, 50, has been a practicing attorney and jurist in California for more than half his life. He has been in the public service of the state, in administrative and legal work, on the bench and as a constitutional officer for 23 years.

Except for absence during Army service in World War II, he served as a Superior Court Judge of Los Angeles County from 1942 until 1958.

Lt. Governor

GEORGE CHRISTOPHER

Biography

The son of a Greek emigrant, George Christopher, Republican nominee for Lieutenant Governor of California, left day school at the age of 14 because of his father's lingering illness, but continued his schooling at night. Four years later he graduated from high school and enrolled in college, where he studied for five years, graduating with a degree in accounting. This totalled nine years of continuous night class attendance.

After practicing as a public accountant for several years, he founded a small milk company. Today the highly successful Christopher Dairy Farm is the largest independently owned dairy in the San Francisco Bay Area. A conscientious fighter for the rights of small business, farmers and consumers against monopoly, George Christopher has long vigorously opposed price-fixing laws and agreements.

In 1945, following his success in the business world, George Christopher entered public service by election to the San Francisco Board of Supervisors. San Franciscans rewarded his ability, his courage and his energy "to get things done" by re-electing him to the board by overwhelming majorities. He twice served as president of the board in recognition of the highest vote ever accorded any member of that board.

In 1955, the people of San Francisco elected him Mayor by the largest majority ever given a candidate for that office.

In 1959, the confidence of the people was again evidenced by George Christopher's re-election for an additional four-year term to the office of Mayor of San Francisco.

San Francisco, under Mayor Christopher's guidance, was designated by Fortune magazine as "one of the best administered cities in the United States." The New York Times termed him a "master salesman" for the major part he played in the successful efforts to bring big league baseball to California. Former President Hoover—a Republican whose outstanding talents were enlisted by the Democratic Truman administration to reorganize and streamline the administrative offices of the Federal Government—has praised George Christopher as "the best Mayor of any large city with which I am acquainted."

Platform

San Francisco Mayor George Christopher present a 14-point program as his platform for election to the office of Lieutenant Governor of California on the Republican ticket. It is as follows:

1. Continue the civil rights fight to assure equality for all in every phase of life in California.
2. Establish a new productive, working relationship and endeavor to be the Governor's trouble-shooter in matters affecting California industry, labor or commerce.

3. Establish for California an administration of direct action.

4. Establish a more effective salary standardization program for the benefit of State employees.

5. Establish a legal limit on the bonded indebtedness of the State of California in order to preserve the credit rating and the fiscal integrity of the State.

6. Broaden elementary and junior high school instruction in foreign language wherever local districts are able and desire to do so.

7. Help negotiate greater share of world markets for California farm products and work to help bring about closer consultation by the State Board of Agriculture with the farmers before establishing California farm policies.

8. Advocate a State personal income tax deduction of $2,500 be allowed for home repairs and improvements.

9. Give local law enforcement officers all the vigorous help they need.

10. Put the brakes on the State's intrusion into local affairs.

11. Propose a statewide committee to be formed to survey the economic value and the military importance of every base and every factory in the State.

12. Recommend the greatest possible acceleration of research into the desalinization of water.

13. Eliminate much overlapping bureaucracy and expense in the Department of Transportation.

14. Maintain continued studies of job opportunities for both college graduates and for our citizens in the critical "40 to 60 year" age bracket.

CHOICE

George Christopher is a driving, dynamic, exceptionally skillful politician. He is also a man of burning conviction, less a philosopher than an empiricist, more troubled by today than worried about tomorrow. He thrives on challenge, zealously turns towards any contest and shows an impressive ability always to extract the greatest measure of benefit from every matter.

He is much too big, much too vital a man to be merely Lieutenant-Governor; so big, in fact, that his opponent, the incumbent, Glenn M. Anderson, completely disappears in Christopher's shadow.

But George Christopher will be casting a much bigger, much bolder shadow before long.

Our Major Political Forecast: (You read it here first.) George Christopher will be running against Democrat Alan Cranston, present State Controller, for the Governorship in 1966. And he should.

Vote NO on Prop 22

Proposition 22 is an amendment to the Osteopathic Initiative Act of 1922. Through this act the people of California created a separate Board of Osteopathic Examiners to stop the harassment of osteopathic physicians by organized medicine. Proposition 22 would eliminate this separate licensing body.

BUT WHY SHOULD YOU BE CONCERNED?

For these reasons:

- 1) Proposition 22, and the rider attached to it, immediately terminate the licensing of osteopathic physicians in California. These physicians have been recognized by state laws and by the California Medical Association as well-trained, ethical and competent.
- 2) By preventing out-of-state osteopathic physicians and surgeons from entering California the amendment would increase the growing shortage of doctors in the State.
- 3) This would increase taxes by forcing citizens to build new medical schools to maintain the present ratio of physicians.
- 4) By eliminating the osteopathic profession in California the amendment would deny citizens free choice of physician. Some 18% of Californians prefer osteopathic care.

Proposition 22 is NOT part of the merger between organized medicine and some members of the osteopathic profession. That merger is completed. Proposition 22 will not change it in any way.

Prevent the destruction of a profession that has served you well.

Preserve your right to free choice of physician.

Biography

The Republican candidate for State Controller is Bruce V. Reagan, president of Atlas Federal Savings and Loan Association in Pasadena, where he also lives.

Mr. Reagan was born in 1902 in Minnesota, and received his early education in the same state at the Shattuck School. He is a Yale University graduate.

His marriage to the former Muriel Benton took place in 1923 in Pasadena. The couple has one son, Bruce V. Reagan, Jr., and three grandchildren.

Bruce V. Reagan has been in business continuously since 1921. He has been a banker and stock broker, in addition to being a savings and loan executive. He also is a director of Rubio Canyon Land and Water.

Mr. Reagan served on Supreme Headquarters Staff in England, France and Germany as a major in the U.S. Army (Reserve) during World War II.

His California legislative service includes being Assemblyman for the 48th District, 1949-50, also Assemblyman 47th District, 1959-62. He is now serving his third term in the state legislature.

In Sacramento he has served on the following legislative committees: education, finance and insurance, elections and reapportionment, industrial relations, joint Assembly-Senate committee on public pension and retirement.

He lists among his civic and community interests the Kiwanis Club, Pasadena Chamber of Commerce, Carmelita Masonic Lodge, Tournament of Roses, Los Angeles Economic Round Table, Military Order of the World Wars, Lincoln Club, High Twelve, American Legion, and National Sojourners.

Bruce V. Reagan's Republican Party activities are as follows: former president, Pasadena Republican Club; delegate at large, Los Angeles County Republican Assembly (which he helped form as a charter member in 1932); former president, Republican Assembly, 48th District; former chairman, Congressional Districts 20th and 21st; former member and officer, Los Angeles County Central Committee; member and former officer, State Central Committee; delegate, National Republican Convention, 1956.

Platform

Republican Bruce V. Reagan promises to "rid the State Controller's office of incompetent political hacks whose only claim to fame is active participation in the California Democratic Council," if he is elected on Tuesday.

In addition, Reagan says he will work for improvement in auditing and accounting procedures to present an accurate, true picture of the State's fiscal condition. He maintains that California needs strength, experience and knowledge of finance in its State Controller's office because today California has the largest state budget, also will exceed New York and become the most populated state in December.

"Incompetent inheritance tax appraisers appointed by the politically oriented incumbent have cost the people and the state money and prestige," Reagan says. "When elected I will rid the state service of these incompetent political hacks and replace them with able appraisers."

Reagan charges that the present Controller has given false reports of the fiscal condition of the State. In addition, sloppy and lax attention to the duties of his office has caused the state to lose millions

CHOICE

The office of State Controller is an office seldom recognized for its power, which extends in many directions beyond its central responsibility. The Controller sits on the Board of Equalization, the Franchise Tax Board, the State Lands Commission, The Pooled Money Board and five others. The power and influence of this office is, perhaps, the broadest in the whole state administration structure of any save only the Governor.

Alan Cranston has wielded this power smoothly, conscientiously and effectively. Though he is one of the most important men in the Democratic party he has not conspicuously used his office for untoward political purposes.

The office of the Controller has a civil service staff of perhaps the finest calibre in all state service. Though Cranston could not, and does not, claim credit for this condition, nonetheless he has had the good judgment to rely confidently on the initiative and judgment of his people. The result, under his very positive leadership, is cause for the people of California to hold this office, and Cranston's administration of it, in the highest regard.

Alan Cranston is the only Democrat this paper is supporting for election. It is a coincidence of our determination to select men, not parties. For it is, in the last analysis, the men who must run our public offices, not the parties. And it is the men, not the parties, who must answer for their performance.

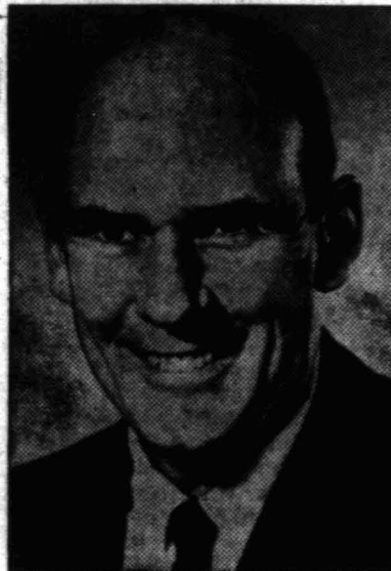

of dollars in the last three and a half years.

An example of this is the depletion of the Unemployment Insurance Reserve Fund from more than $1 billion to slightly more than $500 million in the short space of time the present administration has been in office.

If elected, Reagan also claims he will return fiscal responsibility to state government. Under him the Controller's office will return to sound business practices which will be free from political considerations and questionable methods. Honest reports, careful audits and the elimination of fraud will keynote Reagan's administration of the Controller's office, he declares.

California's fiscal program NOW is in the hands of a liberal, free-spending bureaucrat with no experience in money handling, he maintains.

Bruce V. Reagan emphasizes he has spent more than 30 years in money management, and is now president of a Pasadena savings and loan association, and has been Pasadena resident manager for one of the nation's largest investment banking houses. He adds that he is a three-term Assemblyman with service on finance, insurance, education and other important committees. He feels confident he has the background and ability to manage California's billion dollar budget.

ALAN CRANSTON

Biography

The first Democratic State Controller since 1886, Alan Cranston is seeking re-election. He is a native Californian and lives in Los Altos Hills.

A graduate of Stanford University, Mr. Cranston was a quarter-miler on the track team during his undergraduate years.

He was chief of the Foreign Language Division, Office of War Information, during World War II, but left this major administrative post without seeking deferment, and enlisted in the U.S. Army as a private soldier. He was discharged from active duty with the rank of sergeant.

Prior to his election to the office of State Controller, Alan Cranston was a business administrator in real estate, property management and investment fields in Palo Alto.

He is also a writer. Before World War II, Alan Cranston was a wire service correspondent in Europe and Africa. In 1939, he sought to alert the United States to Hitler's dangerous plans and wrote an anti-Nazi version of Mein Kampf which sold more than 500,000 copies before the courts ruled it violated Hitler's copyright.

Mr. Cranston and his wife, Geneva, have two sons, Robin and Kim.

He has been a leader in community affairs in Los Altos, and chairman of many civic projects in the same town. A leader in the rebirth of the Democratic Party in California, Alan Cranston was the founding president of the California Democratic Council.

Mr. Cranston has been, as Controller, chairman of the Franchise Tax Board, only statewide member of the Board of Equalization. He also administers various tax laws with his own staff.

As Controller, too, he also served on many other State boards and commissions. These include State Lands Commission, custodian of California's oil-rich tidelands; School Building Finance Committee; State Teachers' Retirement Investment Board; Water Resources Development Finance Committee; Veterans Finance Committee; State Park Finance Board; Harbor Improvement Bond Committee; Pooled Money Investment Board.

Platform

Seeking re-election, State Controller Alan Cranston points to his past record in office as sufficient platform for his campaign.

As Controller, he has reduced the budget three per cent and personnel nine per cent in the basic controller department, and this despite workload increases. Efficiency has been gained by installing the largest and most complete electronic computer system in use in any state government. This modern equipment permits the state's accounts to be kept more efficiently and economically; it is paying for itself and soon will be saving California $1.5 million annually.

Financial reports to the people have accurately, clearly and impartially revealed State financial transactions involving more than $14 billion annually during his regime. Also, Controller Cranston has participated in a program to increase interest earnings on State investments. This program is in contrast to the scandalous situation of a few years ago when scores of millions of dollars in State funds sat idly in bank accounts, earning no interest.

The concept of the tax-exempt status of charitable institutions has been liberalized through his efforts. With other public officials, he has worked to bring about competitive bidding and lower interest rates on State bond issues.

New, progressive leasing methods instituted by Cranston, promise to increase State revenue from tidelands oil by millions of dollars annually. Tidelands oil is a public resource estimated at more than $20 billion.

He has simplified income tax forms, providing protection for taxpayers against the abuse of information in individual tax returns, and the blocking of a threatened overnight shift of a huge real-property tax from private utility companies to homeowners, businessmen and farmers. The tax involved up to $100 million annually.

Financially, Alan Cranston has helped decrease interest rates on loans to districts for school construction, and he helped to increase interest earnings on the State Teachers Retirement Fund. He also was instrumental in introducing educational television in State colleges.

New procedures for more efficient administration of the new Abandoned Property Laws has resulted in the proper and rapid distribution of millions of dollars to rightful claimants under his controllership.

As an administrator, Alan Cranston has worked vigorously to implement the Fair Employment Practices law in all areas under his jurisdiction. He worked for the passage of this act.

Since being State Controller, he has been available to anyone, maintains an "open door" policy and welcomes inquiries from all citizens. He has treated the problems of individual citizens promptly and sympathetically.

As evidence of good economic health in California at the end of his term as Controller, Cranston cites a report by the State Chamber of Commerce of "a new forward thrust in retailing, manufacturing and consuming in the first half of 1962."

most forceful, intelligent and poli-

Assembly, who was ruthlessly gerrymandered out of his district in the latest legislative reapportionment.

It is a fact little-known elsewhere that his determination to campaign for this office was the result of most careful, most earnest deliberation. But, once his mind was made up, he lent himself to the effort determinedly.
Busterud is a man of tremendous capabilities, who would bring to the office of Treasurer the fullest possible measure of ability and competence.

His opponent, who has succeeded in alienating some of the most substantial economic powers in the state, for the sake of some spectacular but transitory prestige in the marketing of state bonds, has proven to be not much more than ordinary in his administra-

A practicing attorney, he has

John A. Busterud was elected to

Biography

Born in Monterey in 1919, Davenport is the son of the late W. A. Davenport, who came to Monterey in 1906 with the 1st U.S. Cavalry, and the late Sarah Glenford, a member of an old Monterey family.

Davenport graduated from the Robert H. Down elementary school and in 1938 from Pacific Grove High School. He attended San Jose State College Police School, where he majored in police science, and graduated with an associate or arts degree.

In 1943 he married the former Marie Mathison, whose family came to the Peninsula in 1923. The Davenports have two children, Louise, 14, and W. A. (Jack) Davenport III, 12.

He entered the U.S. Army in 1942 as a private and was commissioned a second lieutenant in 1943 after attending the Infantry School at Fort Benning, Georgia. He was assigned to the 75th Infantry Division, and became assistant provost marshal. In this capacity he saw service in Belgium, France, Holland and Germany during World War II, including combat service during the Battle of the Bulge; the Rhineland and the Colmar Pocket. He was awarded the Bronze Star for meritorious service. Immediately after V. E. Day he was assigned to the XVI Corps as assistant provost marshal and was responsible for the policing of three towns near Paris. Later he was assigned to the 86th Airborne Division, and upon its return to the United States, marched with the division in the victory parade in New York City.

After separation from the army in 1946 with the rank of captain, Davenport returned to duty with the Monterey police department until he was recalled to active duty to attend the Counter-Intelligence Corps School at Camp Holabird, Maryland.

In 1948, Davenport attended the California Highway Patrol Academy in Sacramento and has twice returned there for refresher courses and also for attendance in courses on public relations and safety. Prior to his recent resignation from the patrol, he was civil defense officer for the Monterey office of the California Highway Patrol, having completed courses of the civil defense schools conducted by the State of California. Davenport served with the California Highway Patrol for 14 years, all of which service was in Monterey County.

Platform

Twenty-two years as law enforcement officer, also 20 years of active and reserve military duty as a provost marshal are experiences which Jack Davenport cites as qualification for him to be elected Sheriff of Monterey County on November 6.

To better equip himself for his work he has taken many Army correspondence courses on police subjects.

Biography

Carmel Police Chief Clyde Klaumann is vying for the position of Sheriff of Monterey County at the polls next week.

He was born in Monterey County and has spent all his life here except for the years he served in the U.S. Navy during World War II. He is a graduate of Monterey High School and makes his home in Carmel. He and his wife, Ruth, have a son, Clyde Jr., a graduate of the Carmel school system who now teaches at River School.

Clyde Klaumann has had 26 years in police work. He joined the Monterey Police Department in 1936, graduated from the F.B.I. Academy in 1946 and was elected president of the Monterey County Peace Officers' Association in 1949. The following year, Clyde Klaumann was appointed Chief of the Carmel Police Department. In 1957, he returned to the F.B.I. Academy to take a graduate training course.

His work as head of Carmel's police department has been honored by President Dwight D. Eisenhower, J. Edgar Hoover, the U.S. Secret Service, the California Assembly, California Congress of Parents and Teachers and the Peace Officers' Association of the State of California.

Chief Klaumann has also been active in community affairs as a private citizen. He is a member of the Presbyterian Church and the American Legion, a past president of the Carmel High School P-TA, and has served on the service extension committee of the Salvation Army and as a counselor for Boy Scouts of America, Inc. His professional experience in education includes teaching at Monterey High School, 1956-59, also being director of publications and public relations at the same school, 1956-59. He was rated a master teacher in 1958. Since 1959, Ed Coffin has been a consultant in research and public relations in the office of the Monterey County Superintendent of Schools.

He served in the U.S. Army Air Force during World War II as an administrative officer and pilot for four years.

CHOICE

Mr. Coffin has gained a wide measure of support among his peers, and has proven administrative talents. He has functioned, as a matter of fact, predominantly in this field, but is not wanting in academic qualifications and accomplishment.

It is difficult to ignore the energy and brilliance of Verna White. Her campaign was perhaps too austere, too reserved and even too intellectual. There is nothing intrinsically wrong with this. Except in politics. The county office would suffer not in the least if she were elected.

VERNA WHITE

Biography

Monterey County's assistant superintendent of schools, Verna White, is running for election Tuesday to the position of county superintendent of schools, a vacancy created by the resignation of Miss Gladys L. Stone.

Miss White, since 1956, also has been director of education in the county schools office.

Born and raised on a dairy farm the task of providing the best possible education, the most enlightened public and the most cooperative educational leadership that Monterey County can have.

I would work with each of the 6 districts in our county to set up a sound program of services; to develop the kinds of curriculum materials and resources they need; to let all of the districts know what services, materials and resources are available; and to provide simple machinery that will make the total program available.

My office would be in constant touch with every district in the county so as to serve as a depository of information that one district might share with another, so that program and services designed cooperatively with one district, or designed within the county office, could be used or adapted for use by other districts. All of us in education must work together for all of the children for the best educational opportunity possible.

I would maintain an open-door policy to be readily accessible to the districts to consider their problems and to work with them. This would be an open door not only for administrators, but for teachers, parents, non-parents — anyone who has an interest in education and the educational program.

The strength of a democracy lies in the fact that the schools mirror the needs and wishes of the people. I would work to strengthen the lines of communication between educators and the public to make sure the public schools are truly representative of the feelings of

I believe firmly that each voice should be heard; that no so-called elite should be singled out for special attention.

in Massachusetts, Verna White received her elementary education in a small country school and was sent with other Acushnet pupils to New Bedford High School on a contract agreement.

She next attended Wheaton College, a small liberal arts institution, and, as a history major with an English minor, graduated with an A.B. degree. She has an M.A. from the University of Michigan, and a Ph.D. degree from the University of Chicago. Her doctorate study placed major emphasis on curriculum and evaluation, with work in guidance and teacher personnel. Evaluating The Ability To Read And Interpret Literature was the title of her doctoral dissertation. She is a Phi Beta Kappa.

Miss White also has spent three years full-time study in California credential courses at San Francisco and San Jose state colleges. These courses included public school organization and administration, secondary school administration and finance, all of which included the legal aspects of California schools. She studied audiovisual curriculum material and techniques, too.

Her experience is varied. It includes seven years as a teacher in elementary and secondary schools, four years in a junior high demonstration school at a state teachers college; two years as instructor at a state teachers college; one and a half years as executive secretary of 16 summer workshops at the University of Chicago; two years as a research assistant in the United States Armed Forces Institute developing and editing tests to enable service men to obtain two years of college credit; 11 years on the faculty of Syracuse University as assistant and associate professor.

Miss White was educational director of a three-months workshop for South American personnel in Chile, a similar workshop in Guatemala City in Central America, and was an adviser to Latin American students who had fellowships at Syracuse University.

In 1958, Harper Bros. published a book, Studying The Individual Pupil, written by Verna White. Her writing on educational subjects has been published, too, in Teacher Educational Journal, The School Review, and The English Journal.

Platform

Miss Verna White, who has a doctor's degree in education, bases her platform on 33 years experience in education both as teacher and administrator. This has given her knowledge of curriculum, guidance, special education, administration and budget and finance requirements needed to put an educational program into effect, she declares, and adds, she also knows the legal aspects of California schools.

Since 1956 Miss White has been director of education in the office of the Monterey County Superintendent of Schools, and is now assistant superintendent in that office. This experience, Miss White claims, gives her understanding of the county office as an intermediary between local and state governments; knowledge of local, county and state officials. She feels she has the competencies to work with all county educational boards to set up a program in accordance with study of changing functions of the county schools office, also define policies within the legal and financial structure of the state.

Miss White pledges herself to bring perspective to the county's educational program so as to include children of all abilities while taking care that high academic standards are established. She realizes the importance of progressively increased academic work in a program articulated through grades 4-14, and has concern for the education of the handicapped child, too.

U. S. Senate

Platform

Known as a "Senator's senator," Thomas H. Kuchel has supported the policies of three presidents, Truman, Eisenhower and Kennedy, while thinking for himself and fighting for domestic matters he judged most advantageous for the American people.

An active legislator, he has championed 447 bills of which the U.S. Senate passed 143 and 98 have become law.

He is recognized for his integrity, sincerity and willingness to meet modern problems with progressive legislation by both Republicans and Democrats in the upper chamber.

A noted conservationist, Senator Kuchel led the anti-billboard fight to preserve the beauty of national highways. He enabled passage of the U.S. Wilderness Bill.

Other legislation which Senator Kuchel has supported includes the $300 million Trinity Dam, $400 million San Luis Dam, Bill of Rights for Labor, 41,000-mile Inter-State Highway pay-as-you-go program, Air Pollution Act to combat smog, Point Reyes National Seashore, Saline Water Conservation Act.

He fought for the adoption of the Medicare Act, prevented the political shifting of jobs and defense contracts in California to other states, kept alive ship construction in this state and led the successful demand for embargo on Cuba.

In addition, Senator Kuchel has served as the President's representative in Africa, the Far East, and Europe.

He has not actively campaigned in California this fall because he judged it more important to stay in Washington during the present critical times.

U.S. Senator Thomas H. Kuchel urges Californians to remain united in the face of any new Soviet aggression anywhere in the world.

"Tomorrow, next week, next month, another crisis could erupt," Kuchel said Tuesday.

"But let no one, anywhere, ever mistake the unswerving devotion of our countrymen to freedom and their earnest support of our Commander-in-Chief when danger arises," California's senior U.S. Senator added.

"I am standing for re-election solely on my 10-year record of service to all the people of California," he concluded.

Biography

A public servant for a quarter of a century, U.S. Senator Thomas H. Kuchel lives in Anaheim and was first elected to represent Orange County in the California State Assembly in 1936. He was re-elected in 1938, and then was elected to the California Senate for two terms. Appointed to the U. S. Senate by the then Governor Earl Warren of California in 1953, he was elected to represent California as a U.S. Senator in the following election, re-elected in the next. He is now the Republican whip in the U. S. Senate.

In 1940, at the age of 30, Senator Kuchel was chairman of the Republican State Central Committee, the youngest ever named to this post.

Following three years' active military service during World War II, he was appointed State Controller by Governor Warren in 1946, then was elected to this position nine months later, re-elected in 1950.

Senator Kuchel married the former Betty Mellenthin and they have a daughter, Karen. He is an Episcopalian.

CHOICE

The State of California has been competently represented by Thomas Kuchel. He is the assistant Senate minority leader, and a man whose own particular character has gained him stature in the "club," that severely critical, highly influential, loosely affiliated group of senators who, irrespective of party or geography, accept one another as men of integrity and competence, or reject from their circles those who fail to demonstrate it. They, far better than we, are the best judges of their peers. And Thomas Kuchel has passed their muster.

Kuchel is a difficult man to label—to his undying credit. He has shown evidence of bold and individualistic thinking, and while he is an intelligent politician, he is not an opportunistic compromiser to whom principle and idealism are useful but inconsequential political adornments. He will stand rather fiercely and independently, when he is convinced that the occasion requires it. Also, he is not a headline grabber, but one who seemingly prefers to work within the comparative obscurity of committees and corridor conferences—places where it is more important what is done than what is said, which is all too frequently an end unto itself on the floor of the Senate.

Richard Richards has a nice smile, and is a quite pleasant appearing person. He is a state senator from Los Angeles, whose unprepossessing record—to say nothing of his campaign statements, which set a new high for triviality and banality—does nothing to recommend him for the high office he seeks. He simply is not of the calibre to pose a serious contest for Senator Kuchel on any grounds other than party prejudice, which is a pretty ignominious way to select anybody for anything.

The semi-finalists and commend-ed students in the merit program constitute about two per cent of all high school seniors.

Biography

Democratic nominee for the U.S. Senate from California is State Senator Richard Richards of Los Angeles. He was born in Iowa, but came to California as a child and graduated from Alhambra High School with a four-year scholarship to the University of Southern California. An honor student at USC, he graduated cum laude, then attended Harvard Law School.

Senator Richards returned to California from Harvard after being granted a teaching fellowship in the USC Law School which granted him an LL.B. degree in 1942.

He is a practicing attorney with his own law firm and has been active in civic affairs throughout his adult life.

For the past eight years, Senator Richards has represented the largest legislative district in this state in the California legislature.

He is married and he and his wife, Berenice, have a son, Kimball Dean Richards.

As a California legislator for eight years, Senator Richards has supported one-fifth of all significant law changes in the state during this period. He led the fight for fair employment practices legislation which resulted in passage of the F.E.P. Bill in 1959. Senator Richards has also advocated a realistic water program for California, and recreational development of natural resources.

Platform

State Senator Richards, if elected to the U.S. Senate, promises to work for "peace and prosperity in a troubled world." He considers the United Nations organization as the best hope for peace and is a personal friend and supporter of Adlai Stevenson, U.S. Ambassador to the U. N.

He is in favor of Federal action to preserve and conserve natural resources, also development of these resources, and recently has consulted with Secretary of the Interior Stewart Udall.

On the subject of citizens' rights, Senator Richards says, "The liberties of the citizens are not so much the large liberties over which revolutions are fought, but the small everyday liberties."

He also states, "The key to survival is national self-discipline. We, as a nation, must be disciplined enough to work effectively and constructively, nationally and internationally, while living under tension and threat."

"We must during this decade embark on a 'talent salvage' to develop and utilize the capabilities of our most precious resource — our youth," he stresses.

About the present government, Senator Richards emphasizes "Verbal support is not enough; we must not lose sight of the fact that President Kennedy needs continuing and consistent support for the decisions and policies needed to guide the nation's domestic and international affairs."

Senator Richard Richards declared Tuesday that it is incumbent upon leadership, within the Democratic Party, as the majority party and the party in power, to face boldly and immediately the immediate problem of war and peace, to protect the interests of this nation and the Free World, and to steer us safely through any international crises.

"As the choice of my party for the U.S. Senate, I accept my personal share of this responsibility and I'm proud I will be working with the President in a positive effort to enact our constructive legislative program, and to meet future crises."

"President Kennedy has given me his unqualified endorsement, and was on his way to California to campaign in my behalf when the Cuban crisis broke," he ended.

BURT L. TALCOTT

Biography

On the anniversary of George Washington's Birthday in 1920, Burt L. Talcott was born in Billings, Montana. He graduated from Great Falls High School where he was president of the senior class and captain of the basketball and football teams, then came to California to attend Stanford University. He obtained a degree in political science in 1942 and a law degree in 1948, after serving as a bomber pilot during World War II.

Immediately after graduating from Stanford Law School, Mr. Talcott became associated with Rosendale, Thomas and Muller, a Salinas law firm, and four years later was admitted into partnership. Six years ago he left Rosendale, Thomas, Muller and Talcott to practice on his own.

Burt L. Talcott is the chairman of the Monterey County Board of Supervisors. He was elected to this body in 1954, re-elected in 1958 and 1962, and represents the Salinas-Alisal district.

In addition to the practice of law, Mr. Talcott taught, 1949-1950, a course in business law for bankers in the Salinas evening school program. During high school and college years he worked as a journeyman carpenter and was a member of the carpenters' union. Later he was employed as an arbitrator in labor disputes, also, 1954-58, as commissioner of athletics for the Coast Counties Athletic League which includes high schools in Monterey, San Benito, Santa Cruz and Santa Clara counties.

Mr. Talcott has an outstanding public service record. In this field he has been regional representative for the California Roadside Council; a director of the American Field Service international scholarship exchange program for teenagers, also a European chaperon in this program in 1960. He has been a director and chairman of the political action committee of the Salinas Chamber of Commerce, also director and vice president of the junior chamber of the same city. He is a member of the Commonwealth Club of California, and has worked in the Boy Scout organization.

Mr. Talcott's public service also includes being chairman of the Salinas Recreation-Park Commission, and president of Junior Achievement, Inc., a free enterprise youth training organization. He is an honorary life member of the Parent-Teacher Association. This highest honor in the organization was awarded Mr. Talcott by the 20th P-T-A District which includes Monterey and Santa Cruz counties.

He was an organizer of the Little

Burt L. Talcott, although a registered and working Republican since he became old enough to vote in 1941, declines to label himself politically. He says, "I strive to do the best in whatever I undertake," and advocates safeguarding individual rights, otherwise, he stresses, "big, reckless spending government will control you instead of you controlling your government."

Talcott asserts, "I am firmly opposed to the replacement of our ally Nationalist China in the United Nations by the present Communist Chinese government as demanded by Red China, the Soviet Union and the other Communist satellite governments. If elected to Congress I will vote for a resolution demanding the United States oppose the admission of Red China to the U.N."

He also says, "If elected your Congressman, I will stand for the following program:

1. Limited executive authority in Federal government—confined, and prescribed by the Congress.

2. The retention by Congress of the right to make and levy taxes and tariffs and the right to appropriate Federal funds.

3. The protection of our citizens from unwarranted government interference in their private lives.

Talcott adds, "As our nation enters its 187th year of independence, it is beset by one of the greatest threats it has ever experienced. That threat is imposed by the rapid growth of executive power in the Federal government. At the root of the New Frontier's 1962 legislative program are 29 proposals for increased executive authority. Each of these proposals would, if granted, call for a corresponding loss of freedom for our citizens. We already have lost a significant degree of freedom when the Federal government owns and operates 60 corporations and agencies in direct competition with private enterprise, with assets of over $30 billion. Government should not fix wages or prices, nor substitute its decisions for free bargaining in the market place."

CHOICE

If the choice of a congressional candidate had to be made solely on the basis of which man was the more ethical there might, in some instances, be neither a choice nor a contest.

In the remarkable instance of the 18th Congressional District, there are two admirable men—ethical, sensitive and humane. But these, unfortunately do not constitute the sole criteria for candidates for political office. They're nice qualities in all of us, and rather important in politicians. They are also nice in surgeons, for instance; but a certain technical facility is also needed to fire anyone with confidence in skill.

When Mr. William Stewart is examined in this dimension, he falls.

When Burt Talcott is similarly examined, he ascends with assuring distinction. Talcott, in a word, may be an emerging politician of quite imposing proportions. The style and determination with which he has thrust himself into the campaign, after the tragic death of Glenn Coolidge, overcoming inevitable inertia, presenting himself resolutely, demonstrating the compelling feature of poise, and rapidly assimilating a structure of political principles of far greater scope than he had been contending with as a county supervisor, has distinguished him. In short, he has displayed capacity, cogency and political stature which can seldom be contrived and is rarely the innate possession of a candidate.

But Talcott has it. He has, as a matter of fact, the dimensions of assurance, persuasion and perception that are almost idealistic in concept were they not reassuringly seasoned.

Talcott is a devoted and rational politician, a quality which may give effectiveness to his principles. He is not carried off on the back of emotional reconnaissances, nor does he seem willing to adhere with fervid but undifferentiating devotion to the ringing generalities of party politics. "I am not a Goldwater, Nixon, or Rockefeller Republican. I am a Talcott Republican," he has said.

It has a tantalizing and distinctive flavor. It would be an enterprising act of the electorate to put him in Congress, to see what it means. The ingredients are enormously attractive.

or and president of the Salinas Valley Stanford Club, and as director of the Stanford Buck Club.

In 1955, Burt L. Talcott was chosen as outstanding young man of the year in Salinas.

He was married to his wife, Lee Taylor Talcott, in 1942, the year he graduated from Stanford, then spent the remaining World War II years as a bomber pilot. He was wounded and shot down on a mission over Austria, subsequently spent 14 months in a German prison camp. Among his decorations he has a Purple Heart with cluster.

Following the war, although married, a father, and holding down a job, Burt L. Talcott completed studies at Stanford Law School.

His son, Ronald, 18, graduated with honors from Salinas High School, where he was a member of the varsity football team. He is now a cadet at the Air Force Academy in Colorado Springs.

Mrs. Talcott is known as an active Red Cross, P-TA and American Field Service worker, also participates in welfare and civic activities.

The Talcotts' home is in Salinas.

Biography

Born in Los Angeles in 1917, William K. Stewart received his elementary and high school education in his native city. After graduating from Los Angeles High School, he worked his way through the University of California to obtain a bachelor's degree with honors in 1939. He continued his work and study program at Harvard Law School where he received his L.L.B. degree before being commissioned as an ensign in the United States Naval Reserve in 1942.

During World War II Mr. Stewart was wounded while directing gunfire in 1945 against a Japanese suicide plane which was attacking his ship, the U.S.S. Gilligan. Subsequently, in hospital, he was awarded the Purple Heart and the Silver Star awards "for conspicuous gallantry in action." He retired from active Navy service with the rank of commander in 1946.

Admitted to the California Bar in 1943, William K. Stewart was associated with the law firm of Dunlop, Ross and Woodson from 1946-1950. The next three years he represented the United States Government in Paris as contracting officer of the Mutual Security Administration and gained experience in combatting Communism on the political front lines of Europe. Following this, he opened an office for the practice of law in Pacific Grove in 1953.

Drawing on his 19 years' experience as a practicing attorney, Mr. Stewart, in 1960, organized a locally-owned savings and loan association. He now serves as an officer and director of this firm in addition to his legal practice.

William K. Stewart's political activities include the following: 1948-50, member of the Los Angeles County Democratic Committee; 1954-56, member of Monterey County Democratic Committee; 1954, Fred Farr Campaign For Assembly work; 1955, treasurer, Fred Farr Campaign for State Senate; 1957, president of the Monterey Peninsula Democratic Club; 1958, Democratic candidate for Congress, 13th District; 1958, member of the Brown for Governor Campaign Committee; 1958, 13th Congressional District California Democratic Council director; 1960, member of the Kennedy for President professional committee; 1960, member of the Monterey County Democratic Central Committee.

Active also in community life, Mr. Stewart has given public service to a number of local organizations. He is a past president of the Monterey Peninsula chapter of the American Red Cross, and a past president of the Pacific Grove chapter of the Salvation Army. He also served as Pacific Grove chairman for the Community Chest.

A former member of the Pacific Grove Rotary Club, Mr. Stewart is a member of the California State Bar Association and the Monterey County Bar Association, also has served as secretary of the latter organization. He is a member of

1. Efficiency in Government.

It would be difficult for an expanding population not to create a larger bureaucracy. Expansion puts special hardship on education, welfare, and such services, as well as on taxes and budgets. I am for fiscal responsibility and a balanced budget. It will become progressively more difficult to balance the needs of the people with the funds available. This is an important domestic problem that must be met with hard work and fresh ideas.

2. Ending farm surpluses.

The American farmer, with American know-how, is the world's most efficient producer of food. He has made us embarrassed with riches. I believe that sharing our surpluses with the world's starving peoples is both good business and a humanitarian move all peoples can understand. In this connection, the farmer needs the help of imported Mexican labor. I favor this program.

3. Recreation and conservation.

One of the significant side effects of an expanding population is the great pressure put upon areas suitable for outdoor recreation coupled with the need of conservation of areas of wilderness, and attendant husbanding of natural resources. The time may be too late for some of this, but every effort must be expended to preserve areas for ourselves and future generations.

4. International.

Most areas of foreign policy are reserved to the Executive branch. On those problems on which I would have a vote, I would be against helping dictatorships of any kind. Appropriations stemming from the Congress for foreign aid should be critically reviewed, with less emphasis on appropriations for military purposes and more emphasis on services which Americans so well perform such as the Peace Corps, the help of the hospital ship Hope, and the people-to-people programs for which we as Americans are known and widely appreciated.

RALPH RICHARDSON

Biography

Dr. Ralph Richardson, now serving his second term as a member of the Los Angeles City Board of Education, and with 22 years of public school and university experience as teacher and professor, is running for the office of State Superintendent of Public Instruction. He is, at present, on leave from the University of California at Los Angeles where he is associate professor of English, also speech.

Dr. Richardson received his early education in public schools in the State of Kansas. He has a B.A. degree from the University of Kansas; M.A. (Speech) from Pennsylvania State University; and Ph.D. (Speech) from Northwestern University.

Holder of a lifetime credential in English and mathematics, his teaching experience includes one year in a Kansas high school, four years as a graduate student instructor at Northwestern, and 13 years as instructor and associate professor at UCLA. He also taught mathematics and radar theory for the U.S. Navy.

His public service includes working with the Los Angeles Welfare Planning Council, Los Angeles Recreation and Youth Services Council, San Fernando Valley Child Guidance Clinic, and the Commission on Atomic Energy and Radiation.

Dr. Richardson was elected a member of the Democratic Central Committee in 1956, and in 1958 was appointed planning and research in education secretary to Governor Edmund G. Brown and served in this capacity for a year. He was first elected to the Los Angeles School Board in 1957, re-elected in 1961 and is a former president of the board who declined re-nomination.

He co-authored with Charles Lomas (UCLA) a textbook titled Speech; Idea And Delivery. Dr. Richardson has also published numerous articles in professional journals and popular magazines, also written radio and television scripts.

As a member of the Los Angeles School Board, Dr. Richardson has made possible team teaching, flexible scheduling, foreign language instruction in the elementary schools. In the curriculum field, Dr. Richardson provided leadership which strengthened kindergarten through high school teaching in reading, phonics, spelling and advanced work in science and mathematics in the Los Angeles school system. He obtained experience in textbook selection and preparation of teachers.

He also had the responsibility of determining a yearly budget of over $340 million dollars for a school district with 700,000 students, 45,000 employees. He consistently urged economies to obtain the maximum return from taxpayers' money. His policies were supported by the public which re-elected him.

Dr. Richardson also aided in the development of the nationally honored California Master Plan for

Platform

Dr. Ralph Richardson, candidate for State Superintendent of Public Instruction, has released a seven-point program to raise the quality of California's public schools.

Richardson declares "California's schools today are good, but not good enough to meet the challenges we face," and asks that "we leave behind us the errors and excuses of progressive education and 'life adjustment' and educate for excellence and for survival."

Richardson's program calls for:

1. Higher standards of teacher preparation and performance, particularly in subject matter competence.

2. Better textbooks to be obtained through state purchase direct from publishers or through state printing, with local districts given the right to select from a multiple series of books approved by the State Curriculum Commission and adopted by the State Board of Education.

3. Increased state aid for local school districts with local property owners carrying a reduced proportion of the total cost of education.

4. Greater emphasis upon subject matter in every level of the public schools, with particular attention given to reading and writing.

5. Eliminating half-day sessions in the state.

6. Updating and improving the quality of instruction and the curriculum in mathematics and science.

7. A longer school year, reorganization of the State Department of Education and specific programs to meet the problem of "drop-outs" (high school students who quit prior to graduation).

Richardson says his program "is based on my conviction that the public schools must continually strive to do a better job in raising the mental, moral and spiritual level of all of our people."

He points out that "California will soon be pre-eminent among the states in population; it is incumbent upon us to become the nation's leader in education as well."

Dr. Ralph Richardson is endorsed by all the major educational organizations of the state: California Teachers Association, California Association of School Administrators, California Association of Secondary School Administrators, California Elementary School Administrators Association — all seven sections, California State Federation of Teachers. Also the California Federation of Labor, CIO-AFL, and distinguished Californians including Dr. Robert Gordon Sproul, president emeritus of the University of California.

MAX RAFFERTY

CHOICE

This is perhaps the most difficult choice between two candidates in the entire election, and the difficulties are ancillary to the main question: who is the most qualified?

It probably may be fairly conceded that Mr. Richardson, by reason of his strong administrative and academic planning background, is perhaps the better qualified of the two candidates. But, in the balance, ironically enough, this is not sufficiently persuasive to gain an endorsement, because of other and transcendent considerations.

Whether willingly or not, Mr. Richardson has permitted himself to become a political stalking-horse of the Democratic party and its compulsive desire to make the office partisan. Secondly, Mr. Richardson openly espouses the cause of making the office appointive. It is difficult to follow the reasoning of a man who will seek an elective office while avowedly favoring the end of that status. Finally, Mr. Richardson has not made clear his position on the function of the Superintendent's office in sponsoring legislation. The incumbent has completely abdicated this field to the proliferation of teacher, superintendent, administrator and P-TA lobbies in Sacramento. This is dangerous and prejudicial, and the volume of educational bills, as a result, is perhaps the greatest of any category at each session of the legislature.

Mr. Rafferty, on the other hand, firmly believes that the office should remain elective, non-partisan and as vitally concerned in the field of legislation as other similar offices—the Attorney-General, the Controller, the Treasurer, and the Secretary of State.

In the end, the choice must, unfortunately perhaps, rest on an empirical resolution, that Mr. Rafferty, academic qualifications aside, is more sympathetic to the trust.

And it's too bad that Cecil Hardisty lost in the primaries, for all of this would now be redundant.

MAX RAFFERTY

Platform

Basing his platform on personal assessment of the California public school system during 22 years as an administrator and teacher, Dr. Max Rafferty opposes Federal aid to schools, favors less frills and waste in buildings, less administrative and auxiliary personnel.

He says, "No attempt must be made by the state to extend control over local school districts. The legislature should give local school districts the right to purchase elementary (as they now purchase high school) textbooks on the open market, instead of having to purchase them sight unseen from the state."

"I favor," he continues, "a greater emphasis upon the scholastic achievement of our so-called 'average' children."

Dr. Rafferty wants, in California public schools, additional courses in economics, civics, ancient history, physics and analytical geometry at the high school level; spelling and English grammar in the elementary schools. He advocates elimination of courses such as How To Talk On The Telephone, and Senior Problems. He favors more phonic instruction in reading, also the introduction of more difficult and demanding books at all grades, including classic literature.

"With the United States in deadly peril from Communism, youngsters must be told of the greatness of our country and its institutions," he stresses.

Dr. Rafferty cites his years as an administrator in Southern California school systems as providing the necessary administrative experience to run the State Superintendent of Schools Office.

Dr. Rafferty says, "I pledge myself to obtain for the children of California the finest education that the taxpayers' dollar can buy."

"It is my intention to do everything in my power to see that as many students as possible qualify for entrance into our universities and, once there, that they are able to stay and succeed."

Biography

Dr. Max Rafferty was born in New Orleans, Louisiana, in 1917. He is a graduate of Beverly Hills High School and continued his education at the University of California in Los Angeles. He was granted a bachelor's degree and master's degree in school administration from UCLA, also obtained a doctor of education degree in the same field at the University of Southern California.

A school administrator, he has successively been teacher, vice principal and athletic director of Trona Unified School District; principal of Big Bear Senior High School; superintendent of Saticoy Elementary School District; superintendent of Needles elementary and high school districts; and is now superintendent of La Canada Schools.

Assembly

ELVIN ANDERSON

Biography

Democratic candidate seeking to represent the 34th Assembly District in the California Legislature is Elvin Anderson, an insurance agent and real estate broker in Monterey, where he also makes his home on Herrmann Drive.

Mr. Anderson was raised on a farm and cattle ranch in Utah, his native state, and was educated in Utah and California schools.

For 25 years he was employed by the Southern Pacific Company as an accountant and rate expert in the organization's accounting department. He is a former director of the Railway Employees Credit Union and has been in the insurance and real estate business for 12 years.

Elvin Anderson came to live in California in 1924 when he was 17 years old. He moved to Monterey County in 1957.

His affiliations include membership in the National Association of Real Estate Boards, California Real Estate Association, Monterey Peninsula Board of Realtors, Moose Lodge, Seaside Chamber of Commerce, and Local No. 890 of the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks. He is a past president of the Monterey Peninsula Democratic Club.

He and his wife, the former Frances Phibbs, have a daughter, Janet, and three grandchildren.

CHOICE

Very little, if any, soul-searching is required here. Mr. Pattee is a forceful, enterprising politician; a real fighter, in fact, whose effectiveness in representing his constituency is well demonstrated.

Even if the need for change was indicated, Elvin Anderson would be no alternative. There is some speculation that the Democrats conceded the election to Pattee in the beginning, out of respect for his party-jumping during the state reapportionment fight. After examining Anderson and his campaign, it is possible.

If elected to the California Assembly as representative for Monterey and Santa Cruz counties, he will strive for government responsive to the will of the people. He also will support efforts of the Brown administration to provide an atmosphere of tolerance and freedom of opportunity in California.

Mr. Anderson highly approves of the Consumer Council Office which protects the public against frauds and is an important voice to offset lobbyists.

Born and raised on a farm, a union man all his adult life and now an independent businessman, Elvin Anderson says he is qualified to represent the working man, the small businessman and the ranchers, as he has understanding of the problems of each.

He declares, if the voters of the 34th District send him to the California Assembly, he will be a strong, independent voice in all legislation for a progressive state and district.

University, State And Junior College; State Facilities Bond Issue

Yes	X
No

SYNOPSIS

Authorizes the issuance and sale of $270,000,000 general obligation bonds for site acquisition, construction and equipment needs of the University of California, state colleges and public junior colleges, facilities for the mentally ill and retarded, narcotics control, correctional institutions, conservation camps, forestry units. Eighty per cent of the funds must be used for educational purposes, and not less than $20,000,000 for junior colleges. Funds are to be appropriated by the Legislature in annual state budget.

FOR

Unprecedented growth in population requires rapid and massive expansion of facilities, particularly during the next four years. The magnitude of the problem, and its immediacy, preclude a "pay-as-you-go" approach, which requires an excessive increase in state taxes. The bond approach will not, apparently, require any tax increase and will spread the burden to future generations, which will also be using the facilities built with these funds. Only essential needs are included.

AGAINST

A quite similar measure was decisively defeated in the June primaries. While borrowing for non-recurring capital expenditures may be justifiable, the need for expansion of educational facilities will continue indefinitely, and the bond approach will prove to be increasingly extravagant and burdensome as interest and redemption costs pyramid, ultimately adding as much as 50% to the total cost.

The measure is a "catch-all" and the voters have no chance to reject particular features. It will rapidly bring the public junior college system under state control, by making the districts depend on the state for construction funds.

CHOICE

The growth problem is real and undebatable. The University of California, in spite of exceptionally high entrance requirements, will probably enroll an additional 13,000 students within the next three years. Those unable to get in are, to an increasing extent, falling back on the state colleges and public junior colleges. In the next three years 30,000 may be added to the 85,500 now enrolled in state colleges. The issue, then, must be argued over means, not need, and it would appear, unfortunately, that immediate borrowing is imperative.

It is regrettable that there is no alternative. The interest and redemption costs will be staggering. Within ten years these costs may nearly equal the revenue realized from sales of new increments of the bonds in that year.

A choice between bonding and pay-as-you-go, or some combination of the methods, may once upon a time have existed, and the question burns accusingly: why was the issue not raised earlier, instead of within only three years of a now galloping crisis which forecast its major dimensions as long as 15 years ago in the brimming post-war baby crop? The question is not merely disputatious; it deserves an answer, a multi-million dollar answer.

There may be justifiable grounds for fearing the further extension of state control over local junior college districts through allocation of bond funds. Nevertheless, the junior colleges are bearing a critical weight in the state-wide educational program, a function which they cannot adequately perform without some state supplementation.

Again, it may be regrettable that the need was not anticipated; but it may be equally as true that, even if it were perceived as anxiously and clearly as it should have been, it would have staggered local resources to prepare for it from current revenues.

The measure, in substantially its present form, was defeated last June, not because of any particularly learned discrimination by the voter, but simply because it was poorly titled. The legislature makes it clear this time what it is for, though they have left largely unanswered why it must be done this way.

Legislators' Salaries

Yes
No	X

SYNOPSIS

Permits legislators to set own salary by statute at a figure not to exceed $11,250 annually, an amount one-half the present annual salary of a member of the Federal House of Representatives. The measure will not increase pensions or death benefits.

FOR

While legislative burdens have increased, salaries remain the same as in 1954. Legislators now spend so much time on official duties that they cannot separately earn a living by carrying on a regular business or profession. With rare exception, members now serve at a financial sacrifice, and many able persons will not seek office because they cannot afford to, or they find higher salaries elsewhere. Even with the proposed increase, legislators' salaries will be less than half the salaries of judges, department heads and other executive officers of the State.

The measure partially releases legislative salaries from the cumbersome thrall of the Constitution.

AGAINST

Higher salaries are no assurance of higher calibre in candidates, and might tend away from citizen-legislators towards professionalism. Generous per diem and mileage allowances provide a supplement, so that total compensation is quite adequate. The liberal retirement plan is also a type of valuable compensation.

The same standards of salary that apply to the civil servant should not be applied to the citizen-legislator. Only New York now pays a higher salary to legislators. Two conflicting measures (the other is No. 17) are confusing to the voter.

CHOICE

Neither Proposition 1 nor 17 meets the issue squarely, candidly, or with any degree of solution. The first step is to get the matter of legislative salaries out of the Constitution and place it precisely where the Federal Constitution does: entirely under legislative control and responsibility.

Secondly, when voters consistently refuse to award increases through no particular grasp of the problem but simply through innate suspicion, they inadvertently promote a deviousness which finds its enterprising expression in the "fringe" approach — the excessive per diem and mileage allowances, and the over-generous retirement benefit. Pragmatically, the result may be the same, but the ethical mischief is enormous.

Until the legislature unscrambles

the problem without so much evidence of subjective embarrassment, and puts the issue solely in to its own hands, thus avoiding any more self-conscious dissimulation, both measures, and any more that come along, should be defeated, not because the need is not genuine, but because nothing other than impromptu expedients is being offered.

Front runner

While thoroughbreds were streaking toward the last turn at the Sacramento State Fair in September, California herself was pounding into the stretch. The theme of the Fair — "Join in the fun! California's Number One" — prefaced the long-expected December turning point when this State is scheduled to drive ahead as the nation's most populous.

Sacramento has been looking even farther ahead to completion of a capital city worthy of California's new stature. By the year 2000, a treelined, fountain-graced 138-acre "campus" will provide room for 40,000 employees and thousands of visitors who will assemble at the Capitol every day. The first elements in this bold plan are under construction.

This constructive answer to the challenge of growth typifies Northern California. Here where 215 new industrial jobs must be created daily to maintain the economy — public, private and business groups work together in an intensive search for new payrolls. Already more than 100 industrial subdivisions provide the basic needs to attract new and expanding industry.

Diverse, dynamic — this is the sound and soaring economy of which this bank has been a part since 1852. And from San Francisco to the Sierra, from Eureka to King City, this is Wells Fargo country. It is our own special land — its people and its promise our first concern.

Measures

Veterans' Tax Exemptions

Yes
No	X

SYNOPSIS

Extends veterans' tax exemptions to cooperative housing units, if occupied by a qualified veteran having a bona fide interest in corporation or trust owning unit.

FOR

Removes discrimination against veterans in cooperative dwellings. Units are limited and carefully defined in National Housing Act.

AGAINST

Will remove some 14,000 additional dwelling units from local tax rolls. It is an incitement to other special groups to ask for exemptions.

CHOICE

This measure, as well as others, violates two fundamental propositions: that exemptions should be by condition rather than class; that exemptions without equivalent reduction in governmental expenses are, in fact, discriminatory and grossly unjust to unexempted taxpayers. Failing in both essentials, it's merely didactic to discuss the merits of the measure further. It should be defeated.

Veterans' Tax Exemption

Yes
No	X

SYNOPSIS

Requires that veterans, to be eligible for $1,000 exemptions, must be residents of California at time of entry into armed forces, or on 6 November, 1962. Extends benefits to survivors. Increases assessment limit from $5,000 to $10,000.

FOR

The requirement of residence will prevent those migrating to the state from availing themselves of an exemption to which they ought not be entitled. Widowers, as well as widows, should be similarly privileged. Only a very few additional beneficiaries are added.

AGAINST

The mingling of a limitation on exemptions with extensions of exemptions is ambiguous, confusing, and deprives the voters of the privilege of discriminating. It will further increase the $73,000,000 local government tax loss from veterans' exemptions.

CHOICE

For precisely the same reasons recited in the synopsis of Proposition 2, and for the further reason that the extension and restriction of exemptions are so artlessly intermingled as to make it impossible to assess the net result of the act, the measure should be defeated.

Assessment Of Agricultural Lands

Yes
No	X

SYNOPSIS

Authorizes local governments by ordinance to provide that, upon application, owners of agricultural land may have their land assessed at its value for agriculture purposes, subject to penalty payments upon conversion of the land to other uses.

FOR

The measure will help agriculture resist pressures toward urbanizing conversion of the vital agricultural lands to residential and commercial uses. It will effectively supplement greenbelt legislation. The penalty provisions will discourage arbitrary withholding of lands from other uses until land values have increased to an irresistibly attractive extent.

AGAINST

The measure provides tax relief for one group of owners at the expense of another group. We are not losing farm acreage; indeed there has been a net increase, and farm surpluses are a continuing national problem. Close-in farmers receive preferential consideration over those far removed, and land developers will be tempted to "leap-frog" to cheaper land farther out from urban centers, aggravating the urban sprawl syndrome. The penalties are not severe enough to prevent speculators from paying back-taxes and still realizing spectacular profits in converting choice exempted lands to other uses.

Every tax exemption breeds other exemptions, further depleting a sorely narrowed base.

CHOICE

The measure is another exemption effort. Though admittedly attractive to urbanites because of the greenbelt and open land aspects, it is of a magnitude whose potential is stunning.

One and one-half billion dollars is now off the tax rolls because of exemptions. It has been reliably estimated that the effect of this exemption would be to increase the tax rate by 5.7%, which is greater again than the 1½ billion now off the rolls. Furthermore, it does not succeed in assuring the advantage of greenbelt use, but it does provide a holding refuge of considerable able value to long-term speculators.

Measures

Administrative cost for assessors will be increased materially, and furthermore, the law as drafted is ambiguous and uncertain in many respects, which simply means the probability of painful and inequitable application.

Its most gross fault, however, is in a dangerous and enormous loophole, the exemption of underlying oil and mineral rights, an alluring attraction to the abuse of the purpose of the measure.

The right of local determination, supposedly secured through the requirement that a local ordinance must first be adopted, is largely illusory, because the measure will apply arbitrarily in all school and other special districts without local determination.

Workmen's Compensation

Yes	X
No

SYNOPSIS

Provides, in essence, that employers' funds, rather than the general funds of the State, shall be assessed to compensate for all employee "subsequent injuries" beyond the original disability.

FOR

Only California and one other state do not now so provide. It represents a continuity of responsibility, that of the employer in the first and last instance.

AGAINST

It will involve the state in expensive litigation. It will increase the cost of goods and services, since employers will transfer the cost, through price raises, to customers and clients.

CHOICE

It is absurd to argue that the employer shall be liable, though covered by insurance, for original industrial injuries, but that the people of the state, through some exquisite and obscure differentiation, shall be liable for any subsequent injury. The measure is right and consistent.

Bond Measures As Statutes

Yes	X
No

SYNOPSIS

Requires bond issues be submitted to voters as a statute rather than constitutional amendment. Requires approval by a two-third majority of each house before submission to the voters.

FOR

Makes more modern the use of the state constitution. Makes submission of bond measures more consistent. Infringes on no rights.

AGAINST

Measure increases the power of the minority party in either house of the Legislature. The requirement that the Governor sign such measures might frustrate the will of both houses.

CHOICE

Hooray, in spite of some misgivings. Anything which substantially streamlines the Constitution, and relieves it of burdensome embroidery is to be saluted. Notwithstanding the generally advantageous nature of the measure, the two-thirds feature is to be deplored, here and elsewhere. The very root of our representative and democratic form of government is the will of the simple majority. The two-thirds requirement, in effect, substitutes a requirement for a great big majority, something no ethical, academic or emotional concept of majority rule supports in any form of government that espouses the democratic principle.

Nevertheless, the measure has overwhelming appeal.

Legislative Revision Of The Constitution

Yes	X
No

SYNOPSIS

Permits legislature to propose comprehensive revision of the Constitution, rather than merely specific amendments. Does not preclude convention revision of change or alter ultimate method of change or amendment.

FOR

The frightfully pasted-up, hacked-at and distended Constitution, amended over 450 times and four times its original length, drastically needs overhaul.

The measure permits the Legislature to propose substantive rather than merely specific changes. Many places could be changed without offending or arousing special groups who covet certain protective aspects of specific provisions of the constitution.

The Legislature gains only the power to propose, not actually to amend.

AGAINST

Citizens should specifically elect agents to propose changing the Constitution. The Legislature, by temperament and because of preoccupation with specific issues, is not fit to propose substantive change. The present Constitution, though long, is a workable one.

CHOICE

The present Constitution is a most confused, obscure and thoroughly unintelligible garbage pail—a fact which nobody recognizes quite as painfully, acutely and intelligently as the Legislature. Much more than lay knowledge is required to expurge it. Citizen prerogatives notwithstanding, the sooner the Legislature is enabled to do something substantial, the sooner California may rid itself of the deplorable encumbrances on its foundation of government.

Legislative Procedure

Yes	X
No

SYNOPSIS

Permits legislative bills to be heard by committees 20 rather than 30 days after introduction. Allows Legislature to take a recess not to exceed 10 days, not to be counted in computing statutory duration.

FOR

Twenty days is ample time for legislators to inform themselves on measures. The recess would provide an interval for legislators to study and to return home to get the sense of constituents on certain bills.

AGAINST

Twenty days isn't enough time to study the thousands of measures usually submitted. The shorter period would work rigorous hardships on usually ill-organized citizen groups. The recess would be expensive to the taxpayer, extending the practical length of the session, increasing travel and per diem allowances.

CHOICE

Even 30 days isn't enough time. But, if it were, then ten of the days could be used for travel purposes. (Continued on Page Nineteen)

Bond Proceeds Fund

Yes	X
No

SYNOPSIS

Provides for fund accounting for money from the sale of general obligation bonds.

FOR

Eliminates the need for separate funds, simplifies accounting procedures. Does not weaken protective provisions on proper expenditures.

AGAINST

Accomplishes very little, and is another example of trivial measures that lengthen the ballot.

CHOICE

A sound fiscal measure. The argument about triviality is valid, but misplaced.

10

Welfare Exemption, Leased Properties

Yes
No	X

SYNOPSIS

Community chests, funds, foundations, charitable and religious hospital and welfare organizations are exempted from property taxation on facilities owned by them. This measure would extend such exemption to similar groups for property leased for 99 years, upon specific legislative and local enactments.

FOR

The measure corrects an inequity, recognizing that long-term leases are substantially the same as outright ownership. Encourages the operation of organizations devoted to public welfare, thus relieving public agencies of a considerable burden of providing the same services. Legislative controls will preclude abuse of the privilege.

AGAINST

The only tax exemption which would be exercised at the discretion of counties. This could result in inequitable treatment of welfare organizations from county to county. Ambiguous wording unleashes the hazard that benefits under the measure could inure to the owner of the land to a greater extent than might be realized by the agency. Another exemption, another corrosion of the tax rolls.

CHOICE

Besides offending the consistent attitude opposed to tax exemptions, this measure offers the additional irritant of concealing the probability of unjust and economic advantages. The ways in which unscrupulous persons could manipulate even the most sincere purposes of welfare organizations to realize substantial—and perfectly legal—gains are so numerous as to warrant prompt and unmistakable rejection of the measure.

Measures

FOR

A protective measure to prevent the necessity of historical buildings being torn down, or remodeled for other use, because taxes are too high. Protection against evasion of oil or mineral rights considerations are explicit in the measure.

AGAINST

A measure of primary benefit to Santa Barbara. A new type of discrimination, with little respect for tax-burdened areas without historical import, which will have to assume the excused taxes. The structures exempted are privately-owned, and private benefit would ensue. The purposes of protection and enhancement could better be achieved by zoning or through specific statute. Fully taxable property will soon become the exception rather than the rule; if this and similar exemption measures are adopted.

CHOICE

No. An historical monument is a public monument, not to be enjoyed privately if privilege is to be sought or is needed. The public pleasure of such structures may be secured more appropriately by zoning them for what they are, not by excusing them for what they are not.

12

Aid To Widows Of Veterans

Yes
No	X

SYNOPSIS

Nothing in the Constitution shall prohibit the use of State money or credit to aid widows of wartime veterans in acquiring farms and homes.

FOR

Widows of veterans who filed for loans before death may avail themselves of State credit. It is, therefore, unfair to discriminate.

Many widows are now supporting themselves and the children of veterans. They need this equalization.

AGAINST

One more concession to an already-privileged group whose needs are no different than those of other citizens. This would prove to be an increasing, rather than decreasing, burden on the State's credit.

CHOICE

There is a rigorous stricture against gifts of public funds or lending of public credit. The measure is an evasive assault upon this prohibition. There is no limit on the amount of credit, not even a requirement that the veteran because of whom the widow may claim was himself eligible for benefits. And it is carrying compassion to an offensive degree.

13

Exemption Of College Land

Yes	X
No

SYNOPSIS

Extends non-profit college exemption to all educational facilities of private colleges, rather than limiting to 100 acres.

FOR

Exemption of non-profit educational institutions has been a principle since 1910, when a constitutional amendment provided a 100-acre limitation, simply because no school had more land than that. Now they do, or could. Accommodation simply means that they can go forward in sharing some of the burden of education.

AGAINST

There is no known opposition, and none has been expressed.

CHOICE

There should be no opposition. The League of California Cities at first opposed the measure; then, upon reconsideration, they amended their position to that of no opposition—but not a positive "yes."

The trouble may very well have lain with the whole theory of opposition to exemption from taxes, and a stand they took many years ago. The Pine Cone is confounded by neither, when rare circumstances suggest that reason, not theory, is a more intelligent measure of judgment.

Marine Corps Promotion

Lieutenant Colonel James M. Sherwood of the 1st Marine Division received his silver leaves in a recent ceremony at Camp Pendleton. He is the son of Colonel John W. Sherwood of Carmel.

Lieutenant Colonel Sherwood, commanding officer of the 1st Anti-Tank Battalion, is married and has three children. His family lives at Camp Pendleton.

Measures

Sale Of Tidelands

Yes	X
No

SYNOPSIS

Permits sale, subject to conditions imposed by the Legislature of tidelands within two miles of any incorporated city, city and county, or town reserved to the State solely for street purposes when Legislature declares they are not used and no longer necessary for navigation purposes.

FOR

Would make possible the development of a large area of industrial land in the San Francisco Bay area. Present restrictions on sale or transfer of tidelands makes reclamation on such development costly and impractical.

AGAINST

The kinds of conditions the Legislature might impose to protect the public interest are unknown. For instance, the future size of the Bay might be affected by this and future reclamation projects.

CHOICE

The measure is supported by the League of California Cities, and can only affect two areas of the state: San Francisco and Sausalito, where the tidelands issue is now only archaic and academic.

15

County Tax Appeals Boards

Yes
No	X

SYNOPSIS

Permits counties in excess of 400,000, when authorized by the Legislature, to create tax appeals boards to perform equalization functions now performed by county boards of supervisors.

FOR

With the board of supervisors fulfilling the equalization function, there is not adequate time for taxpayer and assessor to present the facts fully, nor for the equalization board to make a deliberative decision. Creating such special boards in the most populous counties (Los Angeles and Contra Costa) would result in more professional boards and more objective ones.

AGAINST

Taxpayers would lose their right to appeal to their elected officials if the supervisors relinquish the equalization function. Since supervisors have the responsibility of preparing the county budget and setting the tax rate, they should also have the responsibility of preserving the tax base. With rulings handed down by several different appeals boards within the same county, inconsistency in such rulings would result.

CHOICE

Equalization of taxes should belong with the legislative group which imposes the taxes to begin with. Furthermore, as an appointed board, the appeals group would have no direct public responsibility. Lastly, it constitutes the beginning of another layer of tedium on the already ponderous bureaucratic structure.

16

Removes Obsolete Provisions

Yes	X
No

SYNOPSIS

Amends 32 sections of 12 articles of the Constitution to eliminate obsolete and superseded provisions; rennumbers the sections affected. Makes no substantial changes.

FOR

Would reduce by six per cent the over-lengthy Constitution and eliminate confusing inconsistencies within it.

AGAINST

No organized opposition, but belief that elimination of deadwood is the wrong approach to much needed revision.

CHOICE

There is no organized opposition to this measure. And there should be none.

17

Salaries Of State Legislators

Yes
No	X

SYNOPSIS

Changes salary of members of the Legislature from $500 a month to an amount fixed by law, but not to exceed $834 a month.

FOR

In addition to arguments presented on Proposition 1, this measure also increases retirement and death benefits.

AGAINST

In addition to arguments presented opposing Proposition 1, it is unfair to taxpayers to bear costs of increased annuities (already generous) to previously retired legislators.

CHOICE

See the choice in Proposition 1.

Measures

18

A. B. C. Appeals Board

Yes
No	X

Establishes staggered four-year terms for members of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Board rather than serving at the pleasure of the Governor. Broadens scope of the Board's review of decisions of the A.B.C. Department to permit consideration of evidence against the Department's decision as well as for it.

FOR

Unanimously recommended by the Senate Fact Finding Committee on Business and Industry. Would give the person appealing a fair and impartial hearing, eliminate abuses and dishonest practices under the present liquor law.

AGAINST

Would weaken authority of the director of the A.B.C. Department by giving the Appeals Board power that no other reviewing agency has.

CHOICE

Staggering the terms of members will frustrate the appointment by the Governor of persons directly responsible to him, which in turn could critically handicap his administration of the liquor laws.

The second change has considerable merit, particularly as it more vividly defines the division of powers between the Board and the Administrator; however, the language of the measure is so obscure that it is really not possible to know precisely what is being enacted, and, if adopted, it would surely have to be tested in courts.

Another unfortunate instance of two choices and bad drafting.

Salaries Of Local Officials

Yes	X
No

SYNOPSIS

Revises and clarifies the law on increasing the compensation of county, city or township officials by providing that all members of a plural board with staggered terms will receive the salary increase when one member of the board becomes eligible for it.

FOR

Corrects an inequity in the present law which discriminates against experienced officials by prohibiting an increase in their salary even though a new member receives higher compensation.

AGAINST

Discriminatory in seeking salary adjustments for members of a plural-member body only. Could lead to proposals of salary increases for other officials.

CHOICE

All members of a board, commission or council equally represent equal people. Salaries, when paid, are paid as compensation for equal representation. The manifest absurdity of equal members serving concurrently at unequal compensation is so clear as to make an intelligent person impatient with dilatory arguments to the contrary.

20

Boxing And Wrestling

Yes	X
No

SYNOPSIS

but retains provision that the Legislature cannot prohibit wrestling or 12-round boxing contests.

FOR

The measure was part of a program in the 1961 session to improve State accounting and budgeting procedures by reducing special fund budgeting. It would also separate the support of the State Athletic Commission from reliance on the funds from the industry it regulates.

AGAINST

The Legislature should not have complete control over the terms of the boxing initiative act.

CHOICE

General rather than specific allocation of funds is the soundest fiscal management of public revenues. Constitutional immunity of boxing matches from regulation is quaint. And ridiculous.

21

Election Of Superior Court Judges

Yes	X
No

SYNOPSIS

Provides that in a county, or city and county, with a population of five million or more, the name of an incumbent superior court judge who files for re-election and is not opposed would not appear on the primary or general election ballot; and would be declared elected on general election day. Specifies procedure to put incumbent's name on either ballot if write-in campaigns are contemplated.

FOR

Would focus voter attention on contested offices, reduce the length of the ballot, provide specific process for write-ins.

EVERY HOME-MAKER

needs this book

to bring peace to the household

Today's homemaker finds it increasingly important to maintain an atmosphere of peace in the family, where each member can find strength to meet the problems of the outside world.

In Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures by Mary Baker Eddy many families are finding the intelligent answer to all their problems.

Science and Health may be read or examined, together with the Bible, at any Christian Science Reading Room. Or it may be purchased at $3.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE READING ROOM

7th and Monte Verde, Carmel
288 W. Franklin, Monterey
210 Forest Ave., Pacific Grove

AGAINST

Would make it more difficult for the voter to exercise write-in privilege by establishing restrictive time limits for the filing of intention to conduct a write-in campaign. Traditional democratic election procedure requires a candidate's name, even if unopposed, to be on the ballot.

CHOICE

While the measure can presently benefit only Los Angeles County, it could serve as an eventual precedent elsewhere. The over-riding consideration is the lightening of an overburdened ballot — even though inadvertent shelter in obscurity may be provided unopposed judges, and obscurity is not a healthy environment for any elected person.

22

Osteopaths

Yes
No	X

SYNOPSIS

Restricts the licensing power of the State Board of Osteopathic Examiners to the renewal of present licenses; no new licenses will be issued by the Board; qualified osteopaths who elect to designate themselves "M.D." will be subject to the jurisdiction of the Board of Medical Examiners.

FOR

This merger has the approval of the California Medical Association and the California Osteopathic Association. The merger is voluntary, and doctors of osteopathy may elect to practice as medical doctors or doctors of osteopathy. The patient will retain the right to choose the service of either a medical or osteopathic physician.

AGAINST

This merger would result in the destruction of the osteopathic profession, since no new licenses will be granted to osteopathic doctors who do not choose to become M.D.s and in confusion in the public mind; will also deprive people of their present right to choose from either profession.

CHOICE

Any campaign as lavishly financed as the campaign for Proposition 22 should be examined critically, and with more than ordinary suspicion, particularly when it appears superficially to be such an innocent and universally beloved proposal.

Well, such an examination of this measure uncovers some interesting things. We would become the only state in the Union which has enacted such a measure. A great number of osteopaths — propaganda to the contrary notwithstanding — are violently opposed to what they consider this CMA coup d'etat.

While all osteopaths may hereafter be qualified in the general practice of medicine, not all MDs will be qualified osteopaths, and people who desire osteopathic treatment may no longer be able to know with certainty that the doctor they select is competent in the field. If everybody wanted the measure approved, it might be harmless. But everybody doesn't, and everybody shouldn't.

23

Senate Reapportionment

Yes
No	X

SYNOPSIS

The establishment and apportionment of 50 (instead of the existing 40) senatorial districts is the big issue, with additional districts allocated to existing single county districts based on population.

FOR

Seats in the Assembly are fairly apportioned on the basis of population, but those in the Senate are allocated primarily on the basis of area. When less than 15,000 people in Alpine, Inyo and Mono counties have power equal to over six million in Los Angeles County, the result is political injustice.

AGAINST

Using population as the basis of representation in both houses would result, in effect, in a unicameral legislature with two houses. The six urban counties which would gain extra seats under this measure already elect 52 of the 80 assemblymen, and have the voting strength to elect the Governor and all other state-wide officials. The system of checks and balances would be destroyed by this measure.

CHOICE

The Pine Cone landed on this measure with both feet in an earlier issue, but we can't resist stamping around on it just a bit more.

It represents a complete rejection of the bicameral theory of government, a cornerstone of our republican concept of legislation. Jefferson called the protection of the rights of the minority one of the highest and most divine purposes of representative government. This is a ruthless and intemperate attack upon this sublime purpose, if it is nothing else. And it is an arrogant expression of the Los Angeles County area, which would come even nearer than they are now to legislative domination.

They do indeed have their problems, but let them not solve them with the state's legislative instruments. Let them use their own devices for their regional needs.

24

Subversive Activities Control

Yes
No	X

SYNOPSIS

The Francis Amendment defines communist and subversive organizations and denies them political party status and all tax exemption. Prohibits members of such organizations or advocates of subversive doctrines from holding public office or employment with the State or any public agency. Requires teachers and other employees of public educational institutions to answer congressional and legislative committee inquiries concerning communist affiliation and subversion.

FOR

The increased danger of Communist and other subversive activity requires our abandonment of reluctance to inquire into beliefs of persons in positions of public trust. Since Communists aim at destroying our system, they are not entitled to the same rights and privileges as loyal Americans, and should be prevented from infiltrating into fields of government and education.

AGAINST

This amendment is not directed at Communists since there are already adequate safeguards against such persons and groups. Rather it is aimed at harassing individuals and groups whose viewpoints differ from those of the framers of this proposal. It would give power to governmental agencies and bodies to brand groups as subversive, and to deny their members public employment, or public office (Section 3). None of the protections of due process that are traditional in the American right of fair play are embodied in its provisions.

The Very Proper Gander
By James Thurber

Not so very long ago there was a fine gander. He was strong and smooth and beautiful and he spent most of his time singing to his wife and children. One day somebody who saw him strutting up and down in his yard singing, remarked, "There is a very proper gander."

An old hen overheard this and told her husband about it that night in the roost. "They said something about propaganda," she said. "I have always suspected that," said the rooster, and he went around the barnyard next day telling everybody that the very fine gander was a dangerous bird, more than likely a hawk in gander's clothing. A small brown hen remembered a time when at a great distance she had seen the gander talking with some hawks in the forest. "They were up to no good," she said. A duck remembered that the gander had once told him he did not believe in anything. "He said to hell with the flag, too," said the duck. A guinea hen recalled that she had once seen somebody who looked very much like the gander throw something that looked a great deal like a bomb.

Finally everybody snatched up sticks and stones and descended on the gander's house. He was strutting in his front yard, singing to his children and his wife. "There he is!" everybody cried. "Hawk-lover! Unbeliever! Flag-hater! Bomb-thrower!" So they set upon him and drove him out of the country.

MORAL: Anybody who you or your wife thinks is going to overthrow the government by violence must be driven out of the country.

SECRETARY OF STATE

fore him, also Secretary of State, he continues the "open door" policy and points with pride to the fact that both doors to his private office remain open to the public during working hours.

He has 20 years of experience in the office he now holds and before that was deputy Secretary of State for seven years.

In addition to being California's chief election officer, he has numerous other duties to perform. But, as the chief election officer he has cooperated with city and county clerks and registrars of voters in a successful effort to conduct honest and legal elections throughout California.

One phase of the elections has resulted in a savings of millions of dollars to California taxpayers. It was Jordan who sponsored legislation consolidating the presidential and primary elections—at present costs, this means a saving of at least three and one-half million each four years!

DON ROSE

Platform

Don Rose is the Democratic nominee for Secretary of State. He is a governmental administrator and lives in South Pasadena.

He has sent the following prepared statement giving the reasons why he is seeking to unseat Frank M. Jordan who has been in office for 20 years.

"It was five full weeks after the June primary this year before the present Secretary of State was able to report the run-off candidates in the contest for State Superintendent of Public Instruction. It was 49 days after the primary—15 days beyond the statutory limit —before the present Secretary of State issued the official report of the vote.

As the chief election officer of California, the present Secretary of State is responsible for the lamentable lack of leadership in bringing about election reforms. During the 20 years he has been in this office, not one single significant improvement has been made in the whole area of election procedures. Instead, he has practiced political buck-passing—repeatedly abdicated his responsibility and failing to help county clerks and registrars of voters up-date our archaic system to meet the mountainous volume of ballot counting and reporting. There are now over 7½ million registered voters in this state, and in most of the 58 counties ballots are tallied by hand late at night by exhausted precinct boards. Then in at least one instance, the county clerk adds them up on a hand-crank adding machine with the help of the local news-men. No corner grocery store would do its business by such antiquated methods.

This situation is indefensible in a time when modern data processing equipment has transformed the entire field of statistical analysis.

It happened 100 YEARS ago

The oldest incorporated trade association in the country, the United States Brewers Association, was organized in 1862... the same year that

IN CALIFORNIA, despite the blizzard of '62, stagecoaches kept rolling on the Salt Lake City to San Francisco run. After arriving in California these rugged travelers often relaxed with a refreshing glass of beer.

For even then, beer was the traditional beverage of moderation. Beer still provides enjoyment for Californians, as well as a good living for the 26,300 employees and the many suppliers of the California Brewing Industry.

TODAY, in its centennial year, the United States Brewers Association still works constantly to assure maintenance of high standards of quality and propriety wherever beer and ale are served.
